PRANZINI. THE TRIPLE MURDERSS. DI CAPITATED AT PARIS

A Disorderly Mob-Desperate Resistance of the Murderer-Effective Work of the Terrible Knife.

[By Anglo-American cable to the Dispatch.] PAFF, August 31.—Pranzini, the marderer of Mme. Regoault, her maid, and her maid's child, was guillotined at 6 clock this morning. He made no confersion. Vast crowds waited about the place of execution during the whole of the night and kept up a constant howling and yelling. The dia was horolble. When the chaplain who was to efficiate at the execution arrived at 4:30 o'clock the mass of people was so great o clock the mass of people was so great that he was almost prevented from resching the gate the prison. Pranzini marched from hiscell to the scaffold with a firm step and defiant air. When the executioners seized him the murderer resisted and fought desporately. demanding that they let him alone The executioners overpowered him and threw him upon the machine, and in an instant had him securely bound. Im-mediately the terrible knife was started. It descended with horrible slowness at first, but then its movement quickened, and the head of the murderer rolled into the basket. The mob outside became very disorderly during the progress of the execution.

HISTORY OF THE CRIME. The triple murder in the Rue Montaigne, for the commission of which Henri Franzini has just surrendered his head to the guillotine, was one of the most sensational tragedies which even Faris has furnished to the criminal records of the world. Maric Regnant was a leading member of the demi-monde of Paris. She lived on the third floor of the house 17 Rue Montaigne with her femme-de-cham bre, Annette Gremeret, and Annette's daughter Marie, a little girl of twelve years. On the morning of Thursday, March 17th last, the body of Marie Regnault, who was also known as Mme. de Montille, was found on the floor of her chamber dead, her throat cut and her body terribly mutilated. Lying near the draw-leading from the chamber to the drawing-room was the dead body of Aniger residence of the Richmond Dispatch, [Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch,] Nonrole, August 21, 1887. ribly mutilated. Lying near the door and inher bed in another apartment was little Marie Gremeret, her head almost severed from her body by the murderer's knife. It was evident that Anuette er's knife. In the mean time, on the Saturday following the triple crime a man regis-tered as Henri Pranzini at the Hotel de Noailles, Marseilles. He inquired anxiously for a packet which he was expecting from Paris, and, finding it had not arrived, left the hotel and spent the night wandering about the catic and houses of ill-repute. In one cafes and houses of ill-repute. In one of these latter he offered for 20f. Marie Regnault's heart-shaped watch, and the girl to whom the offer was made recognized it at once. She notified the po lice as soon as Pranzini left her on Sunday, and they traced him to the Palace of Longchamps, where he had gone after receiving the expected packet at the hotel. The lakes and other receptacles of Longehamps were drawn, and the result was that a num ber of the missing pieces of jewelry stolen from Rue Montaigne were fished up. Pranzini, becoming frightened, had taken the packet to Longchamps man, wove about him such a weed of circumstantial and direct evidence that his guilt was made as plain as though he had confessed it. His entire history was hunted up, from his birth to the assassinations which made his infamous reputation world-wide. That history charact that he was a thief who lived reputation world-wide. That history showed that he was a thief who lived upon his thefts and the earnings of unfortunate women who became infatuated with him. The last of these women was a Mme. Sabbatier, with whom he lived at 40 Rue des Martyrs. This woman at first tried to save him by declaring that on the night of the triple crime that on the night of the triple crime in layer left her house; but as Pranzini never left her house; but as she saw the strong evidence which had been secured against her lover she retracted this statement, admitted that the was not at home that night, and told the story of his proceedings on the following day, which were enough of themselves to convict him. Mme. Sabbatier implored Pranzini to make a clean confession and throw himself on Democratic organization is not looked the court of the court has a clean confession and throw himself on Democratic organization is not looked the court has a clean confession and throw himself on Democratic organization is not looked the court has a clean confession and throw himself on the court has a clean confession and throw himself on Democratic organization is not looked the court has a clean confession and throw himself on Democratic organization is not looked the court has a clean confession and throw himself on Democratic organization is not looked the sample of the Baltimore Sum says: The refusal o the mercy of the court; but he was upon with favor by at least two of the deaf to her appeals, and declared his innocence to the last moment, not-sioner Lyman regards the action as Sabbati-r, declared that she lied, but that the woman told the truth was evident from her manner and from corroborative evidence. The witnesses from Marseillen completed the story, and Mme. Regnault's watch and other jewels in the possession of Pranzini were in themselves mute but clowers witnesses to his crime.

After Pranzini's arrest in Marseilles he was placed in a cell in a police prison, and the first thing he did was to tear rope were visible on his neck for several bours after his attempt on his own

A singular feature of the assassina-tions in the Rue Montaigne was the appearance with Pranzini on the day after the crimes of a dark-complexioned man, who has been described by several witnesses, but who has never yet been identified. This man, according to the coachman who drove Pranzini to riff John P. Lavinder, with two assistthe station when he left for Marseilles, ants, went there to arrest him. rode with him and saw him off on his journey, but that is the last that has been heard of him. If, as is the theory, he was an accomplice of the as-sassin, Pranzini refused to the last to betray him, and contradicted flatly every witness who testified to seeing them together. This unknown man went with Pranzini to the telegraph office from which the cable to the American lady was sent, to the post-office, and to the railroad station, and there he was lost, forming the ugly mystery yet unsolved involved in the great crime of the 17th of March.

Pranzini himself, while stolidly denying that he killed the women and girl, refused to tell where he was on the night of the triple crime. To all questions on this point he answered, "I am not at liberty to say. I decline to compromise a lady." This effort to play the part of a gentleman of nice honor was made the subject of many scathing sarcasus by the president of the court, and it did not deceive the jury, who, after an absence of two hours, returned with a verdiet of guilty, on all the counts, of murder and rob-bery. Then for the first time the as-sumed fortitude of the assassin gave way. He turned pale and tore the handkerchief which he held in his hands to shreds.

"What have you to say?" asked the President, turning his face toward the convicted man.

"I have nothing to say," he hissed between his teeth, "but that I am innocent."

The sentence of death on the block was at once pronounced. Pranzini staggered and would have fallen but for the efficer who quickly grasped him.
As he was led from the court he muttered again and again, "I am innocent, innocent," and with this lie on his hos

Nobody had seen Pranzini murder the three inmates of Marie Regnault's apartments, and he stoutly denied the crime; but the detectives of Paris, after the Marseilles police had captured their man, wove about him such a web of circumstantial and direct evidence that his guilt was made as plain as though other wharf has been ordered to be built at the mouth of the Western branch. The Washington correspondent of the mercy of the court; but he was deaf at her appeals, and declared his immocence to the last moment, notwithstanding the terrible array of unanswerable evidence against him.

The most important witness on the trial was Mme. Sabbatier, who swore that Pranzini was out all night on the night of the crime, and returned to her late the next day. Suddenly he began to cry, and told her he had witnessed a terrible scene. He said that he was with Marie Regnault when a knock was heard at the door. She told him it was her lover, who was very jealous, and pushed him into the wardrobe. The man then entered and murdered the two women and girl before his yety cyes, and he dared not step forth to protect them. The Sabbatier believed this story, and pawned her jewels to get the money for Pranzini to go to Marseilles. He explained his flight by saying that Regnault had his pho-

(Special telegram to the Dispatch.) Lyncheuro, Va., August 31.—News was received here this afternoon that Judge R. F. Mays, of Botetourt, had met with a serious accident near his home, at Eagle Rock, and was in a precarious condition. The particulars are as follows: Judge Mays in company with some friends boarded a hand car with some friends bearded a hand car for a short trip on the Richmond and Alleghany railroad. On the way the car was derailed and Judge Mays thrown heavily upon the ground. He is in an unconscious condition, and the physician attending him thinks that his skull is badly fractured. A LIVELY SKIRMISH.

A report of a lively skirmish between a deputy sheriff's posse and an escaped horse thief in Henry county reached here this evening. Jim Clark, who was sentenced to the penitentiary for CLOSE QUARTERS. They caught sight of him in the yard and ordered him to throw up his hands, which he did, but in doing so drew a pistol and fired on Mr. Richardson, one of the posse, who was advancing on him. Bichardson returned the fire, and each emptied his revolver at the other without effect. Clark made good his escape. In the mean time Sam Muck, Clark's brother-in-law, who had attempted to assist him, was shot in the mouth by one of the officers. HE HAS TO GO TO JAIL.

Robert Taylor, arrested for robbing the postoffice at Waller's Depot, Henry county, in default of $500 bail was sent to jail by the United States Commissioner to await the action of the grand jury. The principal witness against him is Euth Staples, a colored woman. Monday night William Reynolds, a half brother of Taylor's, broke into her house and beat her severely over the head with a pistol, but fled at the approach of some of her people. Officers are after him. Tobacco-cutting is beginning in this section in earnest.
